

WA Botanic Garden

A TRAIL THROUGH TIME

HISTORICAL TRAIL

Discover the evolution of the Western Australian Botanic Garden—a vibrant showcase of WA's unique biodiversity. For six decades, this living collection has been more than a beautiful space; it's a hub for conservation, restoration, research, and education.

From wildflowers to woodlands, each area tells a story of transformation and purpose. As our population grows, so does the Garden's role in inspiring people to protect native flora. Carefully curated plant collections support scientific research and public awareness, helping secure the future of our species.

Explore the trail and witness how nature, science, and community come together to preserve WA's botanical heritage—for today and generations to come.

Scan the QR code to learn how each department contributes to the Garden's growth and care.

Scan Here